Side Note from David Hill, May 7, 2026:

There is a bit of marginalia written vertically along the edge of one page and which is my favorite. It reads:

"Many Men of Many Minds, Many Birds of Many Kinds, Many Fishes in the Sea, Many More Disagree".

I have been unable to locate the origin of this saying, beyond its appearance in the Daybook. In any case, I enjoy it and have committed it to memory. We would wish now- in these times- to encounter such a broad and pragmatic social outlook; a casual philosophical rule of thumb which perhaps stood good stead in that other age of practical, yet providential and progressive activity.
